the United States bureau of fisheries, which said that on three subjects the laws of the two states should be in accord. These were: First, the prohibition of the catching of sponge or female crabs during the entire year; second, the restriction of dredging of crabs to at most four months, and, third, the protection of the peeler crab under three and a half inches, instead of three, as it was before. instead of three, as it was before.

instead of three, as it was before.

In Effect in Maryland.

In Maryland the first two regulations are already in effect, and the bill now in the legislature provides for the third. It was learned, however, by Mr. Vickers that Virginia was planning to extend her closed season for sponge crabs only fifteen days, so that it would be closed from June 15 to September 1, as before, and that she was taking only one month (November), from her sixmonth dredging season.

Mr. Vickers and Swepson Earle, engineer of the commission, went to Richmond last week and talked the matter over with Gov. Trinkle and appeared before the committee on Chesapeake bay and tributaries and found that the report of Virginia's intentions was correct.

Habits of Crabs.

The valentine ball at the Marine Bargacks tonight for the benefit of the wounded veterans of the world war, given under the aussipces of the Flanders Field Unit of the American Women's Legion, is to be a most attractive affair. A notable array of patronesses has already been announced, with the name of Mra Edwin Denby heading the list. The Marine Orchestra will furnish the music. Officers of the unit having the affair in charge are Mra William M. Connor, president; Mrs. C. Viola Fellows, first vice president; Mrs. Gauss, secretary, and Mrs. Frederick Melvin Brown, treasurer. Mr. Earle explained that the reason for the disagreement on this matter was to be found in the habits of the crab. The male crab likes comparatively fresh water, with a grassy bottom in which to shed and grow big and fat, but the female, when the time comes for her to lay her eggs, does not like fresh water or grassy bottom.

been intimated in official circles. The scheme is described as being full of difficulties that will have to be surmounted before it would be approved by the members of the cabinet. The President has been studying the program, and it is understood that he is in accord with part of the plan, but has been unable to study all of the details as yet to form any opinion on them.

The majority of the President's official family are said to be unable to agree on the details of the reorganization plan and are understood to want more time to formulate changes and modifications that would be agreeable to all the departments before final action by Congress should be considered.

There has been no information as to when the revamped plan would be ready for Congress, but it is believed much delay will be encountered before a unanimous agreement can be reached.
